JANESVILLE, WISCONSIN, THURSDAY, AUGUST 17, 1882.

Published Every Evening Except Sunday, at $7 a Year.

NUMBER 132

The Prohibitionists of the Seventh District have nominated Mr. B. F. Parker, of Janesville, for Congress. He has never had any legislative experience, but that matters not in this case, as his nomination was a matter of form.

The country will pardon the Republican party for having within its ranks such a man as ex-Senator Dorsey. It is not often that "such a detestable rot" gets in the Republican party, and it is a credit to the party that they do not stay in very long.

Frederick Douglass and ex-Senator Doollittle will attend the meeting in Chicago next week for the purpose of raising money for a monument to the memory of John Brown. Mr. Doollittle must be heading for no Democrat believes that John Brown's soul is marching on.

The effect of one of the amendments to the constitution of the State to be voted on at the coming election, will be to add one year to the terms of the present State officers and all the county officers elected next fall; and after this year there will be biennial elections of all State and county officers.

The spirit of the age does not seem to have taken hold of the Rev. Mr. Sharrack, who went to Colorado from Kentucky. He was a poor man then, and went to the new State to preach. While there he struck a silver mine worth $250,000, but he still continues to preach in the little and quite unpretending church at Gunnison.

The vitality and endurance of W. C. Coudebeck, the veteran actor and famous comedian, are nothing less than marvelous. He is now 74 years old, and since the 4th of February, 1880, more than two years and a half, he has not missed a performance. He is one of our most accomplished actors, and in his old age enjoys the esteem and confidence of his dramatic friends throughout the United States.

The Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias of the World, will convene at Detroit on the 22d of this month. Hon. John A. Hinsey, Grand Chancellor of the State of Wisconsin, has perfected arrangements by which all persons in Janesville wishing to visit Detroit during the session of the Supreme Lodge may do so for seven dollars for the round trip from Janesville. The return tickets will be good to and including the 23d. All persons desiring tickets should apply at once to Stanley B. Smith, at the Rock County National bank. The entire trip will be made by rail. We trust that a large party will be made up in this city to visit Detroit. Extensive arrangements have been made to make the stay of all guests delightful. Mr. Smith should be informed by those intending to go, by tomorrow night.

As a matter of course, the Geneva Convention renominated Mr. Williams on the first ballot. It was a foregone conclusion several weeks ago, that such would be the result. There was no prominent candidate against him outside of Jefferson county, and beside that there seemed to be a general desire on the part of the Republicans of the district to give him a renomination. A sixth nomination for Congress, coming as this one has, is an honor of which Mr. Williams should certainly feel proud. He is the only Republican member of Congress from Wisconsin who has received such an honor, and each time a nomination was secured without a struggle. That has made it all the more pleasant and the honor all the more substantial. The outlook is not different than in other years. The majority which Mr. Williams has usually received may be reduced a little this year in consequence of Jefferson county, which is Democratic, being added to the district, but the vote in other parts of the district will come up to the round numbers of years gone by. The people have unbroken confidence in his ability and honesty, and will give him an election by a decided majority as usual. A report of the Convention's proceedings will be found elsewhere.

A few days ago the Gazette and several other papers in the State, printed in substance, the following:

Hon. Charles G. Williams received the credit of being mainly instrumental in securing a raise of salaries for the poorly-paid railway mail agents. The new schedule of agents takes immediate effect. By it 3,500 clerks will be benefited.

The Evening Wisconsin, in reprinting the paragraph, makes the following comment: "Perhaps 3,500 clerks are benefited, but there are many who must suffer under the provisions of this bill. It makes the pay of railway postal clerks contingent upon the number of miles traveled by them instead of upon the amount of labor actually performed. Thus, the clerks who run between Chicago and Milwaukee have suffered a decrease in wages, although they are compelled, by the large amount of mail matter handled between those points, to work to their utmost capacity. The pay of the clerks mentioned was certainly small enough before the passage of the Williams bill, and for them to suffer a decrease when they expected and deserved an increase, seems particularly unjust." The object of the bill was to increase, in a general way, the small pay of the postal clerks, and it was presumed that under the Williams bill this was done without doing an injustice to any one else.

WAUKESHA, Wis., Aug. 16.—Bial Rolf, the man who attempted suicide last evening by cutting his throat, ended his life to-day by running a pitchfork into his vitals. His brother was an eye-witness, but was kept at a distance through means of a short fork. Rolf was in constant fear of being mobbed or taken to an asylum, which corroborates the supposition that he was insane.

STARTS OUT BAD.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, who owns and lives in an apartment-house at No. 14 Fifth avenue, left this city on Monday last for Grand Rapids, Mich., on important business. Advantage was taken of his absence by a half-boy employed in the house to rob the General of property valued at nearly $2,000. The youth is now under arrest, and it is believed that nearly all the stolen property has been recovered. The dishonest boy is James Higgins, 20 years old, who had been employed in the house for nearly a year. His father had been a much valued servant in the family of Judge Lowell, of Massachusetts, for forty years. When he was the age of 21 years he will receive between $7,000 and $8,000 bequeathed to him by a relative. He is well educated, and was a favorite among the residents of the house. When arrested Higgins was about boarding the Fall River boat for Boston, and carried a hand satchel. When the satchel was searched it was found to contain the jewelry stolen from Gen. Sickles's jewel case. This property consists of a gold Grand Army badge, studded with diamonds, a gold watch and chain, a diamond pin, a diamond, a pair of diamond bracelets, several rings and army badges, and a valuable gold-mounted revolver.

THE SANFORD CASE.

BROOKFIELD, Wis., Aug. 16.—After three weeks of delay, occasioned by the hope that new evidence would be discovered that would throw some new light upon the mysteries connected with the death of the late Rev. Henry Sanford, the Coroner's jury have at last rendered their verdict. Every effort to gain further information with regard to the life of the deceased before coming to this place has proved futile. Nothing new has been discovered which in any way weakens the suspicions that were first formed. It took the jury but a few minutes to make up their verdict, which was that the deceased died from the effects of arsenic administered by his own hand. Whether or not the suicide was accidental they did not feel competent to judge from the evidence presented, but in view of the fact that before his death Mr. Sanford confessed to have been all his life tormented and oppressed by the thought that he would eventually prove a victim of hereditary insanity, there are but few who do not believe that he purposely poisoned himself to escape a more horrible end. The report that the doctors who attended him in his last illness are suspected to have administered arsenic to their patient by mistake has been published through the press. This report is entirely without foundation, and is only one of the many rumors that are afloat in regard to the affair. The most careful search fails to reveal the whereabouts of the unfortunate man's private papers, which, if they exist, are supposed to contain information in regard to his property and the disposal which he wished to have made of it. In view of his approaching end, he destroyed them, the whole affair, so far as the public is concerned, comes to an end with the disbanding of the Coroner's jury. If, on the other hand, they are only waiting to be found, they may furnish an explanation to the present mystery, which, view it in whatever light we will, is puzzling in the extreme.

SALES OF RAILWAY LANDS.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 15.—The negotiations for the remaining 55,000 acres of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Company's land in Minnesota resulted in the sale of the land to A. Boyson, Danish Vice Consul at this port. Mr. Boyson announced his intention to bring over a colony of Danish settlers at once. The Danvers banker endeavored to secure the Minnesota land, but failing in this, is negotiating for the purchase of 70,000 or 75,000 acres in Dakota.

A DOUBLE MURDER.

YACONA, CITY, Oregon, Aug. 16.—Dr. B. F. Hutchinson, a highly respected citizen, and his son, aged 13, were found dead to-day. Both were shot. The murder is supposed to have been committed by an Indian for robbery. He escaped, but a party of armed men are scouring the country. If caught, the Indian will doubtless be lynched.

THE GENEVA CONVENTION.

The Renomination of Mr. Williams on the First Ballot.

Special to the Republican-Sentinel.
GENEVA LAKE, Wis., Aug. 16.—A convention representing the Republicans of the First Congressional District was held at this place this afternoon to nominate a successor to Mr. Williams. To the ordinary mind there are serious objections to holding a convention at Geneva. It is an out-of-the-way place, several miles from any station, on the St. Paul Company's line, and when the Northwestern Railroad is used, the trip from Milwaukee is made by way of Kenosha, Chicago and Crystal Lake, and consumes ten hours' time. I asked several gentlemen why Geneva is selected. John E. Bennett, of Janesville, said it was because there was a beautiful lake handy, and a sail would be a relaxation after the work of the Convention is through with; another said it was because Geneva had good hotels and hospitable people; Congressman Williams said it was because it would be so handy for the candidate who gets beat to take to the woods.

The nomination of Mr. Williams by the Convention to-day has the special significance of being the only instance in the history of Wisconsin Republicanism that a member of that party has been renominated for six consecutive terms. Cadwallader C. Washburn served ten years, and Philetus Sawyer ten. Charles A. Eldridge served ten years in Congress, but as a Democrat. The Convention was called to order at 12 o'clock noon in Ford's Opera House, by John R. Bennett, chairman of the Congressional District Committee. The call was read by the Chair, after which, upon motion of Mr. Vossburg, of Kenosha, Mr. P. O. Reynolds, of Geneva Lake, was elected, chairman of the Convention. Pliny Norcross, of Janesville, was chosen to act as secretary. A motion was adopted for the Chair to appoint a committee on credentials, which the Chair promised to do as soon as he found out who the delegates were. Mr. Reynolds then announced the following as the Committee: H. B. Strong, Beloit; S. S. Rockwood, Whitewater; Geo. C. Smith, Jefferson; John Vossburg, Kenosha; H. A. Sheldon, Burlington—one from each county in the Congressional District.

OBJECTIONS TO A RECESS.

A motion was then made to take a recess until 2:30 o'clock. There were several objections to that motion. Dr. Reynolds suggested that as there was to be several excursions on the lake in the afternoon, and that nearly all present desired to leave as soon as possible, it would be better to work right through, and not adjourn for dinner. The matter was disposed of by ordering a recess of fifteen minutes to give the Committee on Credentials time to do their work. When the Convention was again called to order the following delegates present reported the following delegates present and entitled to seats in the Convention.

SENATORIAL DELEGATES.

First Senatorial District—H. A. Sheldon, H. C. Stayer.

Eighth Senatorial District—J. B. Stebbins, S. S. Rockwood.

Seventeenth Senatorial District—H. P. Strong, Z. P. Burdick.

Twenty-third Senatorial District—Jesse Stone, Geo. C. Smith.

ASSEMBLY DISTRICT DELEGATES.

Kenosha County—First District, J. R.

Slauson, E. B. Fish; Second District, Michael Quinn, Hugh Griffith. Kenosha County—First District, J. B. Vossburg, Charles Franz. Walworth County—First District, D. P. Clough, A. H. Kendrick; Second District, B. H. Reynolds, W. H. Harbut. Jefferson County—First District, T. Moak, R. N. Patten; Second District, Wm. Phillips, W. P. Forsyth. Rock County—First District, S. T. Merrill, C. M. Smith; Second District, J. R. Bennett, Pliny Norcross; Third District, Andrew Barless, P. M. Green. The report of the committee was accepted.

THE BALLOTS.

Mr. John R. Bennett then moved that the Convention proceed to take an informal ballot for a candidate for Congress. Adopted. W. H. Harbut and J. T. Moak were appointed tellers. After a pause to give time for the presentation of names, the Chair concluded that the formality was to be ignored, and ordered that the tellers collect the votes. They did so, and after counting them made the following report:

Whole number of votes cast.....25
Necessary to win choice.....13
Of which C. G. Williams received.....15
J. B. Vossburg received.....8
T. D. Weeks received.....2

Jesse Stone moved to proceed to a formal ballot. Adopted. The result showed that one of the two Weeks men in Walworth county changed to Williams and the other to Cassell. The vote was:

Whole number cast.....28
C. G. Williams received.....21
J. B. Cassell received.....7

Mr. Phillips, of Jefferson, one of the six who stood by Cassell as long as it was of any use, then moved to make the nomination of Mr. Williams unanimous. Adopted amid applause.

WAITING UPON THE NOMINEE.

A committee, consisting of one from each county, was appointed to wait upon the nominee and inform him of the action of the convention. The committee appointed was as follows: Wm. Phillips, Jefferson; S. S. Rockwood, Walworth; J. M. Stebbins, Kenosha; S. T. Merrill, Rock; J. H. Slauson, Racine.

While the committee were absent on their mission the delegation from each county presented a name for membership on the Congressional Committee, as follows: Jefferson, W. H. Hoard, Rock, Pliny Norcross; Kenosha, Charles Franz; Racine, J. R. Slauson; Walworth, J. E. Hog.

The committee, appointed to wait upon the candidate, at this point entered the room with Mr. Williams. He was received with an enthusiastic burst of applause, and after being introduced by Mr. Phillips, of Jefferson, addressed the Convention.

His speech, while well received, was unexpectedly long, and grew wearisome to an audience that had not had any of the long, tedious, and uninteresting speeches of the kind before them. He began by returning the proposition of the delegation to the Convention, and after remarking that it was an extraordinary thing for a Wisconsin Republican to be nominated for Congress six times in succession, said that if the district could stand it, he thought he could. He was proud of the fact that his long service to the confidence of the people in him had never been shaken. He was more deeply sensible of the endorsement more deeply sensible of the endorsement he received this day, coming as it does from such a party, such a State, such a district and from such a constituency. They compose men in all the walks of life—the merchant, the lawyer, the mechanic, the farmer, the politician and the editor—all had stood by him with unflinching support. It was something of which any man might be proud. He could only say that he went into Congress at the beginning of his first term, clean-handed, and it was his purpose to leave Congress clean-handed. In all his actions which as a public official he had never been shaken. He was more deeply sensible of the endorsement he received this day, coming as it does from such a party, such a State, such a district and from such a constituency.

THE RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. Williams then made an elaborate explanation of his vote to pass the River and Harbor Bill over the veto of the President. He asked for a stay of judgment for thirty days, so that the people could be placed in possession of all the facts and then he was certain that there would be a change of sentiment respecting that bill. He said the American people did not care to march about the country and the amount appropriated, as that any of it might be squandered. It seems not to be known that the River and Harbor Bill contains a saving clause which requires the approval and recommendation of the army engineers before a single dollar could be used upon any river or harbor. He had no march about the country, and a single dollar upon a backdrop, if any were mentioned in the bill.

Mr. Williams then spoke at length upon the question of civil-service reform, the prohibition movement, and such like matters. While he was in favor of a reform in the civil-service, and in the respect for the civil-service, gentlemen who are interested in that regard, he was unwilling that the Republican party should be divided upon any collateral issue whatever. The present Congress commenced its session with a Republican majority of one, and the party cannot afford to give a vote in the hands of its friends. He said the plan of the Democrats to secure control of the Forty-eighth Congress was for the Democratic governors of the Southern States to disregard the report of the election inspectors in Republican districts and issue certificates of election to the Democrats. He said that a majority in the next House. For this reason he hoped that no Republican would be led from the strict path of duty by any side issue like civil-service reform or prohibition. The issue must be a square one between Republicanism and Democracy, between fair elections and an honest count on one side, and dishonest elections and fraud on the other.

Indiscretions of the Gossips.
Some odious cynic recommended a wife and mother-in-law as the best mediums for making known the things that all the world is interested in knowing. Of course no man worthy the name will subscribe altogether to such a brutality as this. There are those who are known as mother-in-law who do not keep the latch-key nor count the wind blows. There are known to be wives who do not invoke "mamma" when the little aggravations that are bound to mar the smooth matrimonial excursions intervene between the kisses of breakfast and the parting of midnight. But all this being admitted, why is it that a public place is chosen by preference for the tossing about of the ball of scandal? Why is it that when she gets her marabout feather, sealskin cloak and seven-button kides on the joy of the house carries the pen-up treasures of the home on an audience of strangers in the parquette, balcony or dress circle?

During the last Empire, as well as the first, a favorite trick of the head of the police was the creation of public sentiment by an ingenious process, of which public gossip was the main point. Whenever crowds came together some invisible respectable member of society would let fall a remark criticizing sharply the government or its measures. To this open challenge, a comrade, also plethoric in all the outward signs of getting up, would make equal pointed declaration of his admiration for the liberal officials. The conversation would, of course, assume the wonted French vivacity and airy phantasies of illustration, that makes even the most ordinary talk of the Gallic people as good as a play. Of course in the end the imperial champion was sure to get the better of his attributions of derangement, and the listeners were of course impressed by nearly all that he had said. In the transformed intellectual athletes. In the majority of encounters the pebble of conversation thrown into the pool set continually growing circles in motion, so that the whole company were soon pushing on the propaganda, other agents being conveniently stationed to give it the proper piquancy of personality and noble scandal.

The next great original Barium will find it for his gain to seize this hint. Who that has ever been in a theater or crowd has not marked the proneness of women to take the world into their confidence? Conversation containing intimate details of domestic history is bowed out trippingly on the tongue, the discursive gossip casting glances on all sides to see if there is an attentive circle taking in her outlying confidences.

What with this craze at a public performance that has not long for the ancient Persian custom that forbade women opening their mouths in the presence of strangers? But the women are not the worst in these public indiscretions. The artless youth of the period has his confidences to make in public and these at the awkward moment when they are least expected. The young men of actual life seek succor in the mimic humors of the scene. At such a moment it really does not interest him to know down to the utmost detail the lurid amours of the cellow youths who seek in the theater an audience for their infinitesimal legs and indescribable body-gear generally, rather than the wit and wisdom of the play. It is true that during intervals the persons who have not the social rights of the drawing-room; but during such intervals every one is supposed to be bent on entertaining his or her neighbor, and the general buzz is supposed to cover any ordinary tone of voice, unless groups of lovers or nothings-in-law protecting their darlings from "brutes" of husbands.—Philadelphia Times.

Which is the Weaker Sex?
Females are called the weaker, but why? If they are not strong, who is? When men must wrap themselves up in thick garments, and encase the whole in a stout overcoat to shut out the cold, women in thin silk dresses, with neck and shoulders bare, or nearly so, say they are perfectly comfortable! When men wear waterproof boots over woolen hose and encase the whole in India-rubber to keep them from freezing, women wear thin silk hose and cloth shoes, and pretend not to feel cold. When men cover their heads with furs, and then complain of the severity of the weather, women hang an apology for a bonnet at the back of their heads, and ride or walk abroad in the northwest winds, professing not to suffer at all.

A French doctor says he has cured rheumatic patients by making them so cold that the excitement would start a profuse perspiration.

A Delicious Appetizer.
That ensures digestion and enjoyment of food; a tonic that brings strength to the weak and rest to the nervous; a cure for dyspepsia and biliousness; it is guaranteed to remove them. Sold by Prentice & Evenson.

Tenderness of Old Hickory.

In the days of his youthful vigor, Gen. Jackson was fond of what Dryden calls "a knock-down argument—a word and a blow." But when age and office had modified his temper, he omitted the blow, though his words were still as hard as cannon-balls. Once, while President, he summed up the Websterian argument against nullification in this style:

"Of this thing is to go on," he said to Gen. Sumner, his old comrade during the New Orleans campaign, "our country will be like a bag of meal with both ends open. Pick it up in the middle or on the side, and it will run out. I must tie the bag and save the country. By the God of heaven, I will uphold the laws," he continued, striding across the room, brandishing a long pipe.

"I hope things will go right," interposed Delo, soothingly.

"They shall go right, sir," exclaimed the President, shivering his pipe upon the table.

"Old Hickory," said his admirers named him, was but a tender sapling when his emotional nature was touched. The slightest reference to his dead wife caused him to bow in grief.

"Sam," he said, at this same interview, "you have been true to your country, but you have made an mistake in it. You are now old and solitary, and without a bosom friend intimately to comfort you. God has called mine away. But all I have achieved—fame, power, everything—would I exchange if she could be restored to me for a moment."

And the strong man trembled with emotion, while, covering his face with his hands, he wept. Her memory he always cherished.

One night, the President's Private Secretary, wishing to consult him about a letter to be sent off in the early mail, tapped at his chamber door. On entering, he found the President sitting, undressed, at a little table on which rested his wife's miniature, propped up against several volumes. Between him and the picture lay her prayer book.

The last thing the iron man did at night was to read in her book, with her miniature before him. During the day he wore the picture on his heart, suspended from his neck by a strong black cord.

The worshippers of Napoleon mention a delicate act of devotion done by him. On being elected First Consul, he jumped into a carriage and was whirled away to Josephine, that he might be the first to hear her good news. But in nine years Josephine was a cast-off wife.

Gen. Jackson made his dead wife's living presence. At his death he willed his property, as he thought she would wish it devised, to his adopted son. The son had shown himself an unsuccessful business man, and a friend suggested that the property be secured to the son's wife.

"No," said the General, "that would show a want of confidence. If she, pointing to the tomb in the garden, 'were alive, she would wish him to have it, and to me her wish is law.'"

The woman whose wish was law to the stern-willed man had been dead seven years.—Youth's Companion.

The Speed of Thought.
Helmholtz showed that a wave of thought would require about a minute to traverse a mile of nerve, and Hirsch found that a touch on the face was recognized by the brain and responded to by a muscular signal in the seventh of a second. He also found that the speed of action differed for different organs, the sense of hearing being responded to in a sixth of a second; while that of sight required only one-fiftieth second to be felt and signified. In all these cases the distance traversed was about the same, so the inference is that images travel more slowly than sound or touch. It still remains, however, to show the position of this interval taken up by the action of the brain. Prof. Donders, by very delicate apparatus, demonstrated that to be about seventy-five thousandths of a second. Of the whole interval, four-thousandths are occupied in the simple act of recognition, and thirty-five thousandths in the act of willing a response. When two brains were connected to operate simultaneously, and twenty-fifth of a second was required for the person to recognize which was the first; but a slightly longer interval was required to determine the priority in the case of the other senses. These results were obtained from a middle-aged man, but in youths the mental operations are somewhat quicker than in the adult. The average of many experiments proved that a simple thought occupies one-fortieth of a second.

Cause for Gratitude.
Uncle Moses met Aunt Sally on Austin avenue. As she wore a down-in-the-mouth expression, Uncle Moses asked her:

"What ails yer, Aunt Sally? Is yer worryin' because Marse Roberts ain't 'posed to be union on church and state, and ter President Garfield gettin' well?"

"What ails yer, den?"

"De trouble am, Uncle Moses, wid my ole man. He am gettin' more crosser every day. I has done my love best, but he am gettin' wussor and wussor every day. Dar's no chance for him to 'prove anyhow."

"I knows yer ole man berry well, and I say yer has cause to be thankful."

"How so, Uncle Moses?"

"Because he can't get no wussor den he am already. He am de meanest nigger in Austin."

And then Aunt Sally whacked old Moses over the head with her umbrella.

The value of the berry crop of New Jersey probably exceeds $2,000,000 annually, including the cranberry crop, which, as a rule, is the most profitable of all the small fruits grown in that State. The blackberry is also an important fruit here, of which, beside the large quantities shipped every summer to neighboring States, thousands of bushels are dried for winter consumption.

Away With Trousers.

The worst and ugliest feature in modern costumes is the trousers. Previously to the beginning of the present century this ungraceful article was unknown. In the far-distant past the Phrygians had worn trousers, but they were loose and of thin material, falling into pleasing folds, but nowhere that I know of, whether on vase or wall, in mural painting, or book, do we find the shape of the leg concealed in the way in which the nineteenth century conceals it. Why is this so? Why are these things hidden? Are the calves of the present day leaner than of yore? Or is it that we have grown honest enough to despise padding them, and are obliged, therefore, to hide them away? The exact reasons which led to the introduction of trousers are perhaps hardly worth seeking; they soon, however, to have been covered at the mere dictate of fashion from the tight trousers and Wellingtons of the early part of the century, these, in turn, having grown from the knee-breeches and stockings of fifty years earlier. But what is important to bear in mind is that history has no record of a garment at once so simple and so ugly as trousers. We are going clean against all precedent in shrouding our limbs in cloth funnels devoid of graceful shape and incapable of folds. And this departure from ancestral wisdom has no particular advantage to recommend it. Trousers are not economical inasmuch as they get baggy at the knee long before they are worn out. They are always getting dirty at the ankles. They are not specially adapted either for cold or wet. On a wet day it is the part from the knee downward that catches the rain, and necessitates changing the whole garment. Indeed, it is the way in which they ignore the knee-joints which renders trousers practically so objectionable. It is at this joint that they drag, and not only spoil their own shape, but inflict a sense of tightness over the whole body by means of braces.

The more discarding of trousers, and substituting knickerbockers and stockings, would effect a great reform in male costumes, a more graceful and salutary change than any other detail, except perhaps the abolition of the top hat. It is almost a waste of breath to declaim against trousers, their hideousness is so generally admitted. Sculptors and painters have found them quite intractable, and resorted in despair to clothing men of the nineteenth century in Roman drapery. Examine what record of costume you like, and you will find the shape of the leg and the lower extremities displayed or clothed with an interesting hoist until you come to this century. Turn over the pages of Pinch, and you can not fail to be struck with the superiority of knickerbockers over trousers from a picturesque point of view, while for comfort and utility they are equally to be preferred. This substitution of knickerbockers or knee-breeches for trousers is one of the pressing reforms of the day—the change is so simple and yet so effectual.—J. A. Golek, in the Globe.

A Prolonged Fast Ends in Death.
Mrs. Hester A. Fryer, Crozerville, Delaware County, abstained from food for fifty-two days. Her period of starvation was ended by her death last Monday. Yesterday she was reported to have passed the last day of her life in a peaceful manner. Previous to her illness Mrs. Fryer was a large woman, weighing about 320 pounds, and seemed to have a very strong constitution. About two years ago she began to be troubled with hysteria, and gradually became so ill that she was confined to the house. She wasted away slowly, and finally became unable to take any food except milk and weak tea, upon which she subsisted for nearly a year. Even this became unpleasant and irritating to her stomach, and about two months ago she determined to attempt a complete fast, with the idea that by absolute rest her stomach might become more vigorous. Fifty-six days ago she commenced her long fast, and no food of any kind passed her mouth for forty-five days, although she occasionally drank water. She died at her home last Monday morning, at the age of 62 years. Her death was the result of a prolonged fast, and her death was the result of a prolonged fast.

—Philadelphia Record.

The Average Newspaper Lie Analyzed.
The average bare-faced newspaper lie, when analyzed, dwindles into utter insignificance. For instance: "A man in Troy, Ga., saw what he thought was a bunch of snakes. He fired thereat, and a monster ten feet long straightened himself out and made for the swamps, gobbling like a turkey." It will be seen that the item contains no mention of the character of the man who observed this wonderful object. He might have "had 'em again." If so, his statements are not entirely trustworthy. But admitting that the man was not afflicted with delirium tremens, there is still a plausible explanation. He might have been mistaken, in the excitement of the moment, as to the real length of the object which he had fired upon. It is possibly worth noting that ten feet long is the length of the snake which he fired upon. The thing at which he fired might have been a cow, and its tail might have been so disposed as to present the appearance of a snake, and the "gobbling like a turkey" might have been the bellowing of the gentle bovine sometimes given vent to when surprised by an excitable man with a shotgun. And there's yet another theory that may be advanced. The man from Troy might have seen a turkey with rattled feathers, and might have imagined those feathers to be a bunch of snakes; and he might have shot the turkey just accurately enough to scatter some of those feathers to the winds in such a way as to cause them to appear like the elongated body of an antediluvian monster. While there is no desire herein to demonstrate the absurdity or even falsity of the quoted statement, it may be said that the item would have looked much better had it been published after this fashion: "A man in Troy, Ga., shot at a turkey and missed it, and the turkey ran, gobbling, into the swamp."—Chicago Herald.
